Rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is characterised by an imbalance between inflammatory and regulatory T cells (Tregs). Recent studies have shown that CD86 positive DCs were the main T cell stimulators in human RA. To further characterize the role of antigen presenting cells in the progression of RA, we examined the expression of CD86 on monocytes of RA patients and analyzed its correlation with clinical and laboratory parameters. Blood samples from 20 RA patients and 13 healthy volunteers were collected. Peripheral blood mononuclear cells were analysed by flow cytometry for CD86, CD83, CD80
